Why study GCSE Spanish?

“Political developments mean change is more pressing. If the UK is to thrive outside the EU, language skills cannot be ignored”

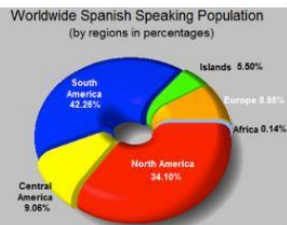

HEPI report

There are over 475 million native speakers of Spanish worldwide. If you add the number of people who use Spanish as a second language or are studying it, the total shoots up to around 572 million, making Spanish the second most-spoken language in the world after Chinese Mandarin!

From J-Lo to Strictly: why more students are learning Spanish

Spanish has been cited as a ‘growth language’ due to the financial progression and population increase in Spanish speaking countries. For example, South American countries have undergone huge economic growth, meaning the continent is becoming more prominent in terms of its international economic position due to exports of its rich source of minerals and diverse agricultural products.

Basically, the growth in the Spanish-speaking population and the fact that the Spanish language is frequently chosen as a second language, leads experts to believe that the 500 million Spanish speakers will continue to grow over the years.
